Privacy Policy Statement

The Hang Seng University of Hong Kong (“University”) respects personal data privacy and as a data user, we are fully committed to implementing and complying with the data protection principles and all relevant provisions of the Personal Data (Privacy) Ordinance (“Ordinance”). In compliance with the Ordinance, a set of policy guidelines and procedures have been prepared to provide practical guidance to staff members and students of the University on the proper handling of personal data in carrying out University functions and activities.

In the collection, use, storage and/or disposal of personal data, the University will adhere to the code of practice of the University based on the six data protection principles stipulated in the Ordinance. You have the right to request for access to and correction of your own personal data held by the University. The University may charge an administrative fee for handling such requests.

The University records visits to our websites by using cookies without collecting any personal data of users. Information is collected, stored and processed by the University or third-party service providers to compile usage statistics and enhance users’ experience. You may manage the cookies in your web browser settings. If you turn off the cookies, your user experience may be affected when browsing the University’s websites.

The Privacy Policy Statement of The Hang Seng University of Hong Kong is subject to change without prior notice. If you have any enquiry about this Statement or the privacy policy of the University, please send an email to dataprotection@hsu.edu.hk.
